LADY BILLIARD EXPERT PLAYS HERE

Richmond billiard and pool "sharks" are interested in exhibitions being given at the Goodloe pool room by Miss Frances Anderson, who is styled the national champion lady billiardist. She will play there Thursday and Friday afternoons and night, giving exhibitions of all the fancy shots and meeting any local experts. The ladies are especially invited to her entertainments.

The Newark, O., Tribune had the following article about her appearance there last week:

Miss Frances Anderson, of Richmond, Va., the woman pocket billiardist of the world, played three exhibition games of 50 balls each, at the Old Hemstead academy last evening, winning two and losing one.

In the first game, Stanley Shaw defeated Miss Anderson by the score of 50 to 27. In the second game Max Grossman attempted to play 50 balls or no count, against Miss Anderson, straight pool, and lost the decision to the champion.

Later Miss Anderson gave an exhibition of fancy shooting and accomplished some wonderfully clever trick shots, to the delight of the crowd.

Then Miss Anderson played a 50 ball match game against the Rocky Mountain Kid, defeating him 50 to 2 in the hole. After this match, Max Grossman, champion of the state, and one of the most artistic cueists in the state, gave a high class exhibition of fancy shooting that won for him marked applause.

GOVERNOR TO HEAR JAILER'S PLEA ON 23D

Woodford Official From Whom Mob Took Prisoner to Lynch Says He Wasn't at Fault

Frankfort, Ky., March 17.—John H. Edger, Versailles, who was removed from the office of county jailer of Woodford county by Governor Morrow following his surrender of the prisoner, Richard James, negro, to a mob which lynched him, has filed his petition with Governor Morrow for reinstatement. The governor set the hearing for March 23 at 10:30 o'clock.

The petition follows: "Your petitioner, John H. Edger, respectfully represents that he is the same person who has been removed from the office of jailer of Woodford county, Kentucky, by proclamation of the governor following the lynching of one Richard James while in custody of petitioner as such jailer."

"Your petitioner respectfully represents that his loss of the custody of said James and the subsequent lynching of said James by a mob was wholly without any failure on the part of this petitioner to perform his duty and wholly without any neglect of duty on his part, and your petitioner therefore respectfully requests that the governor of the commonwealth by proper order reinstate the petitioner in his said office as jailer of Woodford county, Kentucky."

"Your petitioner avers that the lynching of said James, his prisoner, was not in any degree anticipated by the petitioner and he was wholly without any fault in the matter and he avers that he did everything in his power to protect the life and person of said prisoner and in no way neglected or failed to perform his legal duties and respectfully requests that the governor fix a time for hearing the evidence in regard to the facts and that such evidence be permitted to be given orally, as petitioner desires only to have all the facts known and wishes to be fully interrogated himself by the governor and the legal representatives of the commonwealth."

Governor Morrow has received no request as yet from County Judge Edmund Mulcahy to offer a reward and until the request is formally made the governor is powerless to act. He talked over the phone with Judge Mulcahy with regard to it and understood that the request would be made, the governor said. The governor added that he would offer a reward of $500, which is the limit, for the arrest and conviction of each or any member of the mob.

Joe Champion, twin brother of the Judge, opened the argument for the defense. He referred to Attorney General Freeling as a "high state official being sent down here to prosecute a poor, innocent country girl for shooting a millionaire." "When Jake Hamon met her," Champion said, "she was a brown-eyed girl whom he coaxed, lured and won. He educated her, not that she might serve him as a stenographer, but that she might yield to his brutal passion."

BILLY SUNDAY HANDS KNOCKERS A KNOCK

Says He's An Old-Fashioned Preacher and Against Church Unity in Cincy Revival

Cincinnati, March 17.—"If Cincinnati can be brought over to the side of Christ, the whole section of the United States which depends on Cincinnati for its commerce will go for the Lord, sure."

This is Billy Sunday's idea of the far-reaching importance of the revival campaign which now is well under way in Cincinnati.

It was expressed by him in a prayer which ended his twentieth sermon in Cincinnati at the services in the Sunday tabernacle last night.

With another large delegation of working girls facing him from the audience, Mr. Sunday covered a wide range in bringing out through all his sermon, the necessity for work, the results of adherence to a policy of doing some thing that would effect something.

Through illustrations drawn from many sources—and especially from instances which had come only from intensive work—Mr. Sunday pictured the beneficial results on the commercial development of the world, and from this drew an analogy of the results that could be accomplished in a spiritual way.

Recurring again and again throughout his sermon was the phrase, "The people had a mind to work," his subject for the evening based on a text from the Book of Nehemiah, from which he draws many of his texts.

Humor rather than pathos which has marked many of his sermons, and cold facts mixed with poetry, made up a large part of the night sermon.

Mr. Sunday knocked out the "knocker" early in his sermon with a few well-placed blows and brought the biggest demonstration of the evening from his audience with a picturization of the typical "knocker" as he saw him.

He again took several raps at the growing love of pleasure, which he declared to be partly responsible for a lessening membership in the church, and scored the moving picture shows which are open on the Sabbath.

"The movies that stay open on the Sabbath are depopulating the Sunday Schools," he declared, presenting figures showing a decided drop in Sunday School attendance in the last few years.

"I'm an old-time preacher of the old-time religion," Mr. Sunday asserted at one point, to let his hearers know just where he stood on such affairs in general.

He made several references to the late war, one a defense of President Wilson's action in entering the war.

"President Wilson did not lead this peace-loving nation into the war—we had to go to war or confess ourselves as a nation of bluffers and hot-air merchants," Mr. Sunday said.

"The war didn't make General Pershing, nor did it make the boys we sent over there—it just gave them a chance to unveil themselves and to show what they were made of."

Mr. Sunday, charging the control of the diamond industry by a big diamond syndicate in South Africa, declared that diamonds could be sold in this country at $40 a carat, with a profit of $18 a carat, if it were not for what he termed a requirement by the syndicate that retailers must pay a certain price and sell for a certain price.

"Nothing is worth what we pay for it today," he declared, as a climax. "Take potatoes. It costs 25 cents to buy a potato, and darn if I couldn't buy a bushel of them for 50 cents. Think of it. A quarter for a spud."

Mr. Sunday defined his stand on church unity when he declared he stood for the individual denominations as against unity.

"I believe in the denominations not in church unity," he declared. "I believe that the denominations represent temperament of the people, just like the styles in dress and hats represent temperament. If any of you are spending your time on church unity, forget it! You'll never have such a thing."
